

CALL FOR PAPERS

6th Islamic Finance, Banking & Business Ethics Global Conference Inclusion, Ethics and Sustainable Finance for Global Resilience

Date: 5 & 6 September 2022 | Venue: INCEIF University

Recurring adversities and shocks faced by the global economy in recent decades highlight the need for global resilience. As nations are moving towards the post-COVID pandemic but facing consequences of the war in Europe, building global resilience has become even more important. While initiatives and policies for sustainable development have been carved and put in place, a resilient economy not only requires the policies to be effective but also must be anti-fragile.

The conference aims to address issues related to inclusion, ethics and Islamic finance and how they are key for global resilience. In particular, the conference seeks to answer among others the following questions:

- Is financial inclusion necessarily good for sustainable development and global resilience?
- Are there policy complementarities for financial inclusion to be (more) effective enablers of sustainable development and global resilience?
- Can ethics substitute weak formal institutions in making the economic system robust and resilient?
- Has Islamic finance fulfilled its promise as a better financial system?
- How can the synergies between Islamic finance and responsible finance shape a resilient financial system and hence promoting economic stability?

With this aim, INCEIF University invites submission of 1,000-word abstracts or full papers and case studies (5,000 words to 10,000 words).

TOPICS

The conference is particularly welcome the following (but not limited to) topics:

- Financial Inclusion and Socio-economic outcomes
- Financial Inclusion and Economic/Social Impacts of Uncertainty
- Ethics and cost of capital
- Ethical investing and sustainability
- Responsible and Islamic Finance Synergies
- Risk and return performance
